

MUST open equipment to interoperability much like landline phones or volp because without it, we cannot call each other or anyone else. I tried to make a call from one video system to another the other day to no success and that was like huh? Strike me in the head. It did not make any sense at all. When I use a TTY it does not matter who made the tty I can directly call another tty user and it works just fine. Let's make this reasonable and open up the equipment, there's no reason to be blocking it so FCC please make the order to happen. Thanks.
